

Dear Dr. Smith,

I am writing to refer Calypso Grey, a 25-year-old female patient, to your ENT clinic for further investigation and management of snoring.

Calypso has a history of snoring for at least 10 years. The snoring is loud and disruptive to their partner's sleep. The patient has also experienced daytime fatigue and difficulty concentrating.

Calypso has no significant past medical history and is not currently taking any medications. They have not had any previous surgeries.

On examination, Calypso's tonsils are slightly enlarged but not inflamed. There is no evidence of nasal polyps or deviated septum.

I would be grateful if you could assess Calypso to determine the cause of their snoring and consider the possibility of surgical intervention. I have attached the patient's medical records for your reference.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely, Dr. Molapisi
